HARRIS TO BACK APPOINTMENTS BY GOVERNOR

Councillor, One of "Willful Band," Predicts Confirmation Will Be Easy

Councillor James G. Harris of Medford today predicted that Governor Coolidge's appointments in the recent shakeup would be confirmed by the Council on Monday, with little or no opposition.

Coming from Councillor Harris, the prediction was generally regarded as of value because in the past he has headed "the little band of willful men" in the Council who dared to speak out when they felt that appointments did not possess the qualifications they felt to be necessary in a public officer.

"I am going to support Governor Coolidge for confirmation on Monday," said Councillor Harris. He also suggested the possibility of the Council resolving itself into a public forum on Monday to hear arguments in protest of any of the great batch of sixty-four appointments.

At the Governor's office it was said that the possibility of a public hearing was remote.

The two vacancies caused by the resignation of Charles E. Baxter from the Metropolitan District Commission of Herbert L. Tishman from the State Department of Labor will probably fill on Monday.

Numerous candidates have been advanced for the Baxter place. Former Mayor Arthur B. Curtis of Beverly has a number of the Metropolitan District Commission, and Frank A. Barker, the Malden newspaper publisher, are reported to be leading the field.

The purpose of the countrywide drive is to raise funds for the ratification of the suffrage amendment in the States which have not yet voted on the question.

RETURN TO MOTHER. Mrs. Rich returned yesterday from Saratoga Springs to the home of her mother, Mrs. Emergent Northrup of No. 34 Clark street, Woburn.

She was arrested when Rich or Wilson broke away from the police and made his escape in a stolen automobile. This was the second time he had been freed from custody after being arrested on a similar charge. While in the Providence court, having been charged a medicine in that city, Wilson made a getaway and the police lost track of him.

This took place a few months after Rich was arrested at Saratoga Springs, N. Y., where he was charged with the murder of his wife, Mrs. Rich. The couple were married by Rev. W. O. Tolson.

The journey to Saratoga Springs led the girl in her room and brought her to the hotel, where the police arrested her. They took him to the station, where he broke away and ran. He looked into an auto and drove off. The girl followed to her mother for funds and returned to her home in her home.

He was identified as Wilson by means of a money order which he had brought to cash recently. This was said to have been sent to his mother, who conducts a hotel in Brooklyn.

BROKE JAIL TO GET HIS FIRST AUTO RIDE

Edwin R. Snow, Back in Solitary, Says Lure Was Too Strong: Sorry Now

Lured to escape from Charlestown State Prison, after twenty years of confinement, because he wanted to "find out what it felt like to ride in an automobile, and wear stars on his shoulders," Edwin R. Snow was sentenced today in solitary confinement. He was sentenced to 10 years.

Snow's privileges will be revoked as a result of his escape from liberty. He will no longer be a trustee, and instead of having charge of funds will be put at hard labor in the shop. He is serving a life sentence for the murder and robbery of a hotel owner when he was seventeen.

Snow, who was the first man to escape from the Charlestown prison in twenty-five years, had more adventure packed into the six hours he escaped liberty than most men do in a lifetime. His experience from the time of his escape until he was captured in Middleboro was hair-raising and constitutes one of the most thrilling adventures of an escaped prisoner in the prison annals of the State.

TIED OF PRISON LIFE. The gray-haired prisoner—he has been in prison since he was a juvenile—checked out of 17—denies that it was his intention for a young South Boston girl that prompted him to escape. He said he was tired of prison life and that there seemed little hope that the State parole board would grant him release for the time.

Women figured in a large extent in his experience following his successful escape, but he emphatically denies that they either assisted him or were the direct cause of his taking "French leave" of his confinement.

Snow, as a trustee, was given considerable liberty and successfully substituted keys for those which let him out of the prison. He had $125 when he reached a garage not far from the prison and there lived a taxi which carried him to South Boston, where he tried to see Miss Helen Flanagan, a young woman with whom he had become infatuated, although she had never spoken to him. It was said that he had seen her while she was visiting the prison with a friend.

BOUGHT WOMAN IN RANDOLPH. He proceeded on to Randolph, where he tried to find another young woman said to be Miss Elizabeth Doherty, whom he tried to have known when he lived in Middleboro. On arriving in Middleboro he said to have tried to reach a young woman by telephone, with whom he had been in love before he was sentenced. The young woman denies this.

His life after this was one after another. Most of his time he spent in his backyards to escape the main thoroughfares, with shot, guns and revolvers. Several times he narrowly escaped being shot but he has in various crawling through the underbrush and was thoroughly drenched in the heavy downpour of rain.

MERCHANDISE UP TO A STANDARD

Dependable Offerings Advantageously Priced for Friday and Saturday

TODAY'S MESSAGE The Strain of the Load

At certain seasons of the year there comes an added strain in mercantile life. It is a time when distribution of merchandise must be performed systematically and when there must be well ordered action following well ordered thinking. At such seasons the personnel of an organization is tried to the utmost and either proves itself or fails. It is then that emergency is met with confidence that we give a kindly publicity to the personnel of our organization as well as to our merchandise and it is done with the realization that long service and experience count when there comes the strain of the load. It is then that emergency is met with an understanding born of experience; the sum total of habit, trained thought and willing courtesy is present without effort. It is the expression of habit, quickened by the demands of the hour. In the coming crowded holidays, we rest confidently secure upon our distributing system and our well ordered salesmanship.

PONDS DRAGGED FOR WOMAN 'SUICIDE'

The Winchester police today dragged North, South and Middle reservoirs in the Fallway in search for a supposed suicide, Mrs. Lena M. Dutton of Winchester.

The woman left home Tuesday last, a note on the table indicating her intention of killing herself because she was "tired of life."

Thanksgiving Day Long Pond was dragged and the work was continued in the reservoir and other bodies of water today. The boys scouts are out on the search, fearing the woman was drowned. The fact that the woman was seen at the house when she left home makes the work of tracing her difficult. Scout Master Marsh who is also special mounted officer is following one lead that locates the woman at Wyndham estate on the Mifflord line Wednesday morning.

The fishermen said she believed she would drown in the large Tuesday night.

WINLAND BILL PROTESTS SUGAR EXPORTATION

Charging that the shortage is largely caused by the shipping of sugar to Europe for triple profits, Representative Thomas A. Winland of East Boston today filed in the House a resolution protesting against further exportation. "Sugar that should be saved for Massachusetts and New England is being shipped out of this country because the increase which have the sugar are able to sell it abroad for a price three times in excess of the local price here," said Representative Winland. His resolution sets forth the shortage is causing suffering and inconvenience in the people of the Commonwealth, and calls upon the Federal authorities to prevent exportation until this country comes safely through the shortage crisis.

Winchester Must Repay Ginn Estate $5,125.05 Tax

The town of Winchester, by a decision of the full bench of the Supreme Court, will have to return to Lewis Parkhurst and others, trustees under the will of Edward Ginn, a $5,125.05 tax, paid under protest.

The trustees in 1914 held Winthrop, a large part of which Mr. Ginn in his will provided should be used for the World Peace Foundation. The assessors of Winchester declared the fund for the World Peace Foundation was taxable, but the Supreme Court says it is a public charity and thus exempt from taxation.

Broken toys—
a lesson!

Do you remember last Christmas morning about ten o'clock? Do you remember how many dreams were already broken?

Can you think back and picture father trying to make that mechanical train go when, although he disliked to admit it, it was already only fit for the ash-barrel?

Do you remember by Christmas night what a large percentage of toys had already ceased amusing the children, because they were broken?

Where was the value in those toys? How much did you get for the money you had spent?

It is an interesting phase of Filene value-giving that we sell only the kind of toys that are reliable and lasting and that will not harm children; no trash!

It is an interesting phase that we sell only good, thoroughly approved books fit for children to read.

Value is more than lowness of price—it is what you get for what you spend.

And the lesson of broken toys, is that Filene's tries in every possible way to give something lasting—something more for what you spend here!

You Save Money by wearing shoes with ADWEAR soles

First: The soles wear three times as long because of the ADWEAR Process of treating sole leather. Vertical thread plugs give the additional life.

Second: By reason of this additional wear, half-solings are less frequent. ADWEAR soles are money-savers on children's shoes. The best makes of shoes have these soles. Ask your dealer to show you a pair.

BAN HAD TO GIVE UP RECORDS

Comiskey, Ruppert and Frazee
Score Point in Baseball War

Chicago, Nov. 28.—American League directors have gained another victory over President Ban Johnson, it became known when owner Charles A. Comiskey of the White Sox, chairman of the battling directorate, asserted that he and his associates had been given various league records that had demanded from him.

Comiskey intimated that the records of the directors, which include Harry Frazee, Boston, and Jacob Ruppert, New York, had been compiled with in satisfactory fashion by Johnson and that the "Three Musketeers" had examined at least the documents, concluding from the financial statements of the league.

DOUBT WISE TWO DEMANDS.
Two demands, however, had to be made before the records were forthcoming. At the first meeting of Comiskey, Ruppert and Frazee, in New York, Comiskey, as chairman of the board of directors, was instructed to ask Ban for the papers, but this request was ignored.

At a second meeting, held in Chicago, Comiskey again was told to obtain the papers, and this time there was a hint of "ball" and "game" which, it is supposed, carried the story since Johnson gave up the point. Comiskey was instructed to make light of the incident, asserting that the papers had been received nearly a month ago. Nothing to this effect, however, had been said by any of the other directors, and Johnson frequently had not been a man that under no circumstances would surrender his records to local representatives of the "Three Musketeers," although it is emphasized that the fact that he would be so instructed to let club executives inspect them.

SERVED JOHNSON AT SERIES.

Colonel Eli Huston, who, with Ruppert, owns the Yankees, declared that the papers referred to in the above story were secured a month ago.

During the World Series Johnson was served with an order to turn them over to the board of directors, said Huston. These documents consisted of financial statements.

At a meeting held here last week the directors voted to demand of Johnson papers and documents relative to his alleged twenty-year term office Johnson claimed was elected for that period at a meeting held in 1915.

The directors seem to have some doubt about it. At any rate, they claim that the constitution of the league prohibits any officer to hold office longer than one year, unless, of course, he is re-elected annually.

B. U. Co-Eds to Bowl

Bowling is the latest sport adopted by the "co-eds" of Boston, it is reported. The Alpha chapter of the College of Business Administration has organized a bowling team and challenges any sorority or fraternity to meet them.

Why Federal Control of the Rails Not Yet a Success

The American has received the following letter from an experienced railroad man:

Director-General Hines recently said in a public statement that in no instance has the government taken a railroad out of the hands of railroad men. Every railroad in the country has been operated, he said, by the officers, managers and superintendents trained under private ownership, and they have not been interfered with by the government in any detail of operation. I have reason to know that this statement is true. And I would like to ask a few pertinent questions bearing on the deficit under government control:

First, operated as a unit there is no competition, therefore no solicitation of business required. In view of this, why did the Federal managers retain and are still retaining on the payrolls at an approximate cost of a hundred and fifty millions per year a high-priced traffic department from traffic managers down?

2—Why have the transportation departments increased the number of petty officials, particularly in yards? To illustrate: The chief official in charge of yard operations is known as a general yardmaster. If it is desired to give him a raise in salary he is designated terminal trainmaster. The authority and duties are the same, and if it is desired to further reward him he is designated superintendent of terminals. Under private control one official with any of the above titles sufficed, but to make a good showing seems not to be the object of the Federal managers, therefore, in order to discredit government operation by increasing expenses they must have a superintendent of terminals, terminal trainmaster and general yardmaster, not to mention the fact that in some yards there are nearly as many assistant yardmasters as switchmen, or in other words a guardian angel for each man.

I could cite numerous cases to prove that the $200,000,000 deficit in operation last year could have been eliminated, or greatly reduced, if payrolls, etc., were not carrying too much dead wood in all departments without exception. Mr. McAdoo, when he asked for a five-year trial, knew Federal managers were taking orders from directors, etc., of their companies instead of from him, and that it would take at least five years to build up an efficient organization.

Whatever the results of the kind of railway administration we have been having since war control, they afford no test of normal government operation under government ownership, because this control has not been effective. A public control cannot hope to be effective when the real administrative powers are under private obligation to make it unsuccessful.

News From the Orient That Slipped Past the Censor

Writing from the capital of China on October 9 to a friend in this city, a well-informed American gives these peeps behind the censorship:

Refused to be interested to know that at the time the Chinese delegates refused to sign the Peace Treaty in Paris, the Japanese brought 40,000 troops to Mukden, unloaded heavy artillery, and that Oba, the Japanese Minister in Peking, threatened an attack upon Peking by these troops unless China receded from her position. This ultimatum was confirmed through the Chinese Foreign Office.

You will also be interested to know that the Texas Oil Company, which has been represented out here by the Japanese Mitsui Company, has been compelled to cancel their sales contract with Mitsui on account of the boycott. The manager of the Texas Oil Company stated that they had not sold a gallon of oil in China since the first of May.

An American out here, by the name of Witham, for the past three years has been investigating the transportation problems of China for the United States government. He has made numerous trips into the interior, and the Japanese are afraid that America has some sinister design, and has therefore asked that he be ordered out of China.

China is supposedly an independent nation. But it has neither military nor financial strength. Physically it is at Japan's mercy and must officially yield to threats of force.

But it is one thing to subjugate a weak government and another to subdue a people. In the boycott China has a weapon before which Japan finds its bullying futile.

At Paris our representatives gave into Japan in its rape of Shantung, excusing the surrender by pleading that no direct American interests were involved.

If Japan undertakes to order the deportation from China of American citizens of whose lawful activities it is distrustful, we shall have a sufficient reason for raising an American issue.

The next President of the United States, among other qualifications, should have the insight, foresight and courage to defend American rights in every part of the world.

GIVING YOUR HUSBAND AN EVEN BREAK

Mrs. Wife, you may sometimes compare your husband with the husbands of other women, and you feel that they (the other women) have much more affable and successful marriages than you have.

But have you considered that you know only the good qualities of the other men?

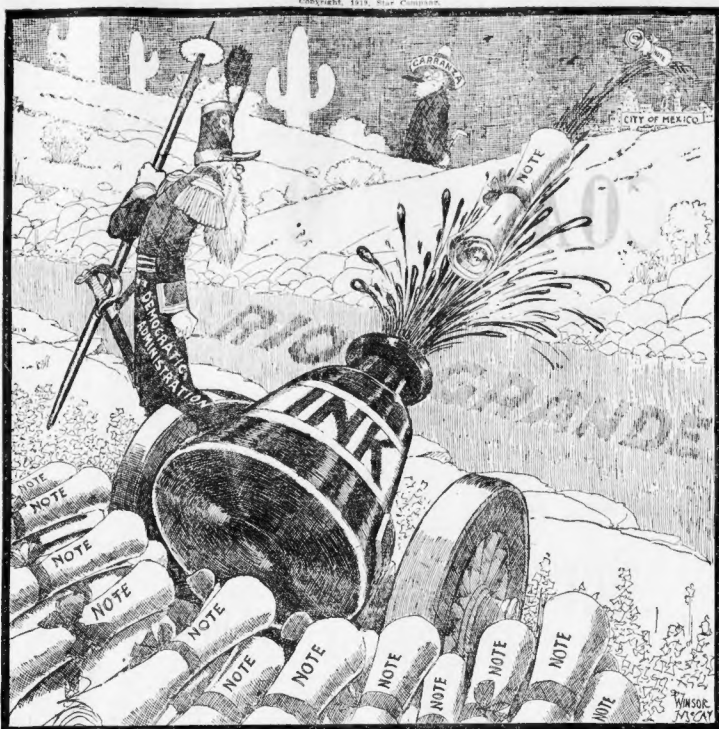

Comparing your husband's best qualities with the best of the other men, what have you found?

Instead of magnifying the things you wish were different about your husband, why not put the same magnifying glass on his good qualities?

The ordinary run of husbands is not so bad, and the point of view from which you seem to be considering your life partner is the one which reflects him in his poorest light.

Usually we do not give full credit to those nearest and dearest to us. It is so much easier to consider their faults and overlook their virtues, or take them for granted.

More Truth Than Poetry

TO THE MAN IN THE MIDDLE

By S. E. KISER

If the price you must pay for the coal
Or the milk or the butter you get
Is driving the peace from your soul.
You must learn to cease being upset.
Accept the conditions and try
To be cheerful in spite of the strain;
Don't question or murmur or sigh—
You're a Bolshevik if you complain.

If the man who saws boards or lays bricks
Works only five hours per day,
While you work from 7 till 6
For only a third of his pay,
Endeavor to seem to be glad,
And think of the joys that remain,
Though your children are scantly clad—
You're a Bolshevik if you complain.

If you see that a few possess more
Than they merit or ever will need
Don't let them perceive that you're sore
Or are troubled because of their greed;
Pay the tax they impose and be sure
To smile if it causes you pain;
No matter what wrongs you endure,
You're a Bolshevik if you complain.

Oh, Man in the Middle, look pleased—
And remember this platitude refrain:
No matter how hard you are squeezed,
You're a Bolshevik if you complain.

BECOMING TOO COMMON

You can still make some people mad by calling them Bolsheviks, but only a few of them get mad enough now to fight about it.

DESERTED AND SILENT

Men still have ambitions and likes and dislikes. There are some who sue dancers abroad; But the empty road houses that line the long pikes Are proof that John Barleycorn's dead.

It is Still Compulsively Safe

A woman may think you are impertinent if you tell her she is pretty, but she will not permit herself to be prejudiced against you.

Perhaps It Can Be Spared Now

The Japanese Emperor is going to send some of his relatives over to see us. Can't the Honorable George Washington be sent to convey them hither?

Y^e TOWNE GOSSIP

By K. C. B.

I'VE WRITTEN twice.

ABOUT THE man.

WHO QUARRELED with his wife.

BECAUSE SHE said.

THAT HE killed prime pie.

AND HE said he didn't.

AND I've told you all.

HOW SHE went away.

TO HER sister's home.

AND WOULDN'T come back.

UNTIL HE'd admit.

THAT HE killed prime pie.

AND I'VE been worried.

AND I'm sure you have.

AND BECAUSE you have.

I HASTEN to tell you.

AND JUST last night.

THAT SHE'S back again.

AND JUST last night.

IN THE dining room.

I SAW them both.

AT A table for two.

AND HE was smiling.

AND SO was she.

AND THEY'd ordered their dinner.

AND SO had we.

AND I watched them look

WHILE I sat and ate.

AND THEY both were glad.

AND MY heart grew warm.

THAT SHE'D come back.

TO THE hall, and man.

NO LONGER sad.

AND I had a desire

TO GO to them.

AND SHAKE their hands.

AND SAY to them.

THAT I was glad.

BUT MY wife protested.

WHILE I insisted.

IT WOULD be all right.

AND SHE said it wouldn't.

AND I said it would.

AND THEY'd understand.

AND SHE said they wouldn't.

AND THEY'd both be sore.

AND I said they wouldn't.

AND SHE said they would.

AND I said she was foolish.

AND SHE said she wasn't.

AND THAT I was foolish.

AND I said I wasn't.

AND SHE said I was.

AND WE almost quarreled.

BUT THE waiter was listening.

AND WE had to quit.

AND SHE'S not here.

AND SHE can't answer back.

AND I know I was right.

AND I'M not going to be bullied.

AND, ANYWAY.

I DIDN'T go over.

AND ON the way out.

WE WENT right past.

WHERE THE couple sat.

AND I looked at the table.

AND IN front of the man.

WAS A slice of prime pie.

JUST ABOUT half gone.

AND AS I passed.

HE LOOKED up at me.

AND HIS great blue eyes

WERE THE eyes of a striker.

QUESTIONS ON THE NORTH STAR AND COMPASS

By Garrett P. Serviss

I OFFER the following letter in illustration of a theme which is often forced upon my attention, viz: the frequent complete failure of our educational institutions to impart to intelligent minds an adequate knowledge of such subjects as astronomy, geology or the simplest mathematical ideas beyond elementary arithmetic. Notice that the writer of the letter shows the literary earnings of an educated man.

"Why is the compass attracted by the North Star instead of by the sun, and why is the sun the earth's attraction instead of the North Star? Why does the Big Dipper seemingly complete a circle around the North Star each day, and also each year? Does the North Star change its position to any extent? What is the distance from the earth to that star?"

The first of these questions is a novelty to me. I should never have imagined it. Consider for a moment what it means. It can only mean that the writer of the letter supposes that there is an attractive force controlled in the North Star which causes the compass needle to point toward the North, and thereupon wonders why the same attractive force does not cause the earth to revolve around the North Star instead of around the sun.

Plenty of Innocents

Now, intending to amuse him, I tried to question, just as it appears in the letter, on a successful wording of my acquaintance, who simply looked puzzled and said, "Why, so that's what makes the needle point North, is it?"

I sat up and said to myself, "Something has got to be done. Evidently this world contains too many people who, in scientific matters, are as innocent as Alice in Wonderland."

Accordingly, I make this little attempt to clear up the question of the North Star and the magnetic needle.

(1) The North Star has no more attractive influence upon the earth, or upon anything on the earth, than any other star, and no star exerts sufficient attraction, at our enormous distance from all of them, to produce an effect perceptible with any means at our command. Taking the estimated distance of the North Star, 316,000,000,000 miles, and assuming that that star is 200 times as massive as the sun, we find that its attraction on the earth would be only about one forty-thousand-millionth of the sun's attraction. There you see the reason why the earth revolves around the sun instead of around a star.

(2) The attraction that causes the compass needle to place itself in a nearly north-and-south direction is not the same kind of attraction which holds the earth in its orbit around the sun; it is due to magnetic and not to gravitational force. Gravitational force is that which causes bodies to fall toward the center of the earth, or tends to draw the earth toward the sun, magnetic force is that which causes a magnetized needle to turn its end toward the "poles" of a magnet, and, unlike gravitational force, which affects all kinds of bodies, magnetic force affects only certain kinds of bodies, principally iron and steel.

Earth's Globe a Magnet

The globe of the earth, as a whole, is a great magnet, probably owing to an enormous accumulation of iron in its core, and, like every magnet, it has two opposite poles, one of which lies about a thousand miles south of the geographic north pole, and the other a similar distance north of the south geographic pole. It is toward the magnetic poles, of the earth, that the compass needle points, and one of the most important objects of polar expeditions is to determine the exact location of these poles with reference to the surface of the earth.

CONSIDERING A UNIVERSAL FEMINE PROBLEM

By Mrs. Wilson Woodrow

"DEAR MRS. WOODROW: I am a girl twenty years old."

Perhaps I am a little young to take life so seriously, but unfortunately I do. My problem is "My Man." I have been engaged to him for two years, and it looks as if I might go on being engaged for twenty years more.

"But I am asking myself many questions. Does it pay for a girl to show a man how dearly she loves him?"

"He is several years older than myself and is well educated. Besides, he has a good business training. But he lost his position some time ago and was 'trotted' for a while. During that time I gave him money and helped him in every way I could, denying myself the vanities that a girl loves. But now that he has another job and is doing well, his ardor has seemed to cool."

"He knows how much I care for him. And how I wish now that I had not shown my love so plainly! If I had only kept him guessing, perhaps he would have appreciated me more. He admires women who wear pretty clothes, and I have only my plain ones, as he could not afford to buy them and to help him out, too."

"I have a very good position and work hard, but lately I have been much disheartened. Perhaps we see too much of each other? I love to be with him and do not care to be with any one else, but I can see that he does not feel the same way, and I am afraid it was foolish of me to let him see how much I care. L. A."

A Universal Problem

You have put yourself in a wrong position on life's check-board, my dear. Being the stranger character of the two, with kinder and more generous impulses, you exercised your executive ability by pushing him off the square he occupied and taking possession of it yourself.

"My problem is, 'My Man.' It is a universal feminine problem. Most women have puzzled over it more or less, usually more; but the wise ones never try to be too helpful—before marriage is past. He knew that he was capable of making his way in the world, or he would hardly have asked you to marry him. Then he had a season of hard luck. He would have worked out of it in his own way and in his own time. If you had only let him do it. What is the difference if he did have a period of worry and discouragement? That would only have strengthened his character and developed his powers of resourcefulness. He could have come to you proudly and said, 'I have won out.'"

Beware the Next Time!

He takes it as a matter of course that you should have advised him, and when you hear him saying the pretty tricks on other girls you mentally say:

"I could be as attractive as they are, if I had not used my money to put you on your feet."

If you believe this engagement may drag on forever, break it; and the next time a man comes scooting he interestedly examines thetic, but don't try to manage his affairs for him.

You are naturally of the sturdy oak type; but in dealing with the other sex capotously with the grace of the tender vine. And never give up the money to an all-gilded ruffian who is down on his hands and knees, but don't let him row the boat while a man lies back on the beach, and a beautiful girl, like you, is much bluffer if you appropriate all the sea conditions and, while he pulls against the stream, you sit and look at him in sweet delight and tell him occasionally how wonderful he is.
